KANSAS CITY'S ONE BIG WEEK THIS YEAR.

The only big event scheduled for the remainder of this year in Kansas City is the combined American Royal Live Stock Show and Kansas City Horse Show, which will be held in Convention Hall, October 4 to 9. The commercial interests of Kansas City have abandoned all plans for fall festivities, and have concentrated their energies upon the American Royal with the determination to make it the greatest event ever staged in the city. The Merchants' association is constructing, for the use of the American Royal, an annex to Convention Hall at a cost of $7,000. This annex will be almost as large as the hall itself, and will be used for stabling the live stock exhibits. All of the judging, however, will be done in the arena of Convention Hall, where the crowd may be comfortably seated while the prizes are being awarded. The American Royal has annually since its establishment in 1899, brought more people to Kansas City than any other event, while the Kansas City Horse Show has packed Convention Hall nightly for a week each year. The combination of the two events this year insures the biggest week in Kansas City's history. Convention Hall, since it was rebuilt following its destruction by fire in 1900, has sheltered almost every conceivable form of public gathering from the National Democratic Convention to the "Gipsy" Smith revival meetings, but this year for the first time it will be the home of the world's greatest live stock show.
